A WEE BIT SANG.

When my heart was, an I'm like the great,
An' it seems bitter that since was sweet,
An' life's road hard the way weary feet,
I just sing a wee bit sang.

Nae laverock I for the world tae hear,
Nae liltie tender, nae mavis clear,
I can just gie a cheep, but wae days are drear,
There's joy in a wee bit sang.

For, singin, my tears forget the fa',
An' the delf an' the changed an' the far awa',
Come back, an' the road's no' hard at a',
Sae a help is a wee bit sang.

When poorth comes an' the cupboard's bare,
Whaur there used tae be a' thing an' the spare,
I tak my crust, an' it's dainty fare,
When munched to a wee bit sang.

When the fowls fa' braves frae the nearby town,
Scorn my hoddie they an' my muckle shoon,
I care nae mair than the man I'm the moon,
I just sing a wee bit sang.

Aye, I sing when I'm happy, I sing when I'm sad,
I may my ain cheer when there's nae tae be had,
Life can never be a thegither bad,
While it leaves me a wee bit sang.

A HAIRPIN.

Mr. Robert Perkins entered his private office with a disagreeable frown. He tossed his hat at the nearest hook and dropped himself into his swivel chair. Then he lifted his knee in the air, clasped his hands about it and gnawed at his mustache. Ordinarily Mr. Robert Perkins was a good looking example of manhood. He was not at all attractive at the present moment, however. That's what the fair haired girl at the typewriter in the outer office thought. She could see him when she raised her eyes above her copy, and she wondered what disturbed him so.

The fact is, he was a very much disgruntled man. He had cause to be. Somebody was spying upon him, and he knew it. Somebody was even prying into his private affairs and stealing information that was of great value to him. Mr. Robert Perkins was a real estate operator, a man of big deals, whose name, in spite of his two and thirty years, was already a power in the street. Up to within a few weeks he had been singularly successful, but now some body seemed to be blocking all his important moves. Only the day before he had prepared in a sketchy way the plat of an extensive tract he had meant to secure, and now he had just discovered that the price had been jumped on him to an extent that meant an outlay of $10,000 more than he had counted on. He knew that his breast was the only guardian of this proposed deal - his breast and his desk, for in the latter was locked the precious plat.

Mr. Perkins pulled out his desk key and thrust it into the keyhole. At least he attempted to do so, but something interfered, something which stubbornly resisted the most violent effort. He knew that the key and brought forth his knife. A few minutes of energetic prying and twisting dislodged the obstacle. It was a hairpin.

A twisted hairpin of bronzed wire. Mr. Perkins instinctively turned in his chair and looked toward the fair haired girl at the typewriter. She was bending over her work and did not see him. Mr. Perkins knew that the fair haired girl used hairpins of bronzed wire.

Somebody had tried to pick his desk lock with a hairpin, the same somebody who had been making mischief for him right along. Could it be that innocent looking young woman? She handled his letters; she was to some extent familiar with his private business.

Mr. Perkins opened his desk with a bang. Then he struck sharply on a call bell that stood at his elbow. A boy appeared in the doorway.

"George," said Mr. Perkins, "shut the door."

When the lad's back was turned, he looked at the hairpin again and sighed. Then he thrust it carefully into his vest pocket. When the boy approached him, he was gazing intently at the plat where it lay, apparently undisturbed, in the desk.

"George," said Mr. Perkins, "do you remember that I left early yesterday afternoon?"

"Yes, sir," said George. "You went away at 8 o'clock with Mr. Tompkins in a carriage."

"Did you leave the outer office before closing up time?"

"Yes, sir. I went to the postoffice for stamps, and I came back by the way of Lawyer Briggs' office and left that abstract."

"How long were you gone?"

"Bout half an hour, sir."

"Was Miss Phillips in the office when you left?"

"Yes, Miss Alice. It was the first time Mr. Perkins had spoken it, and he thought it a very pretty name, and then his fingers closed on the hairpin and his heart hardened.

"She was here when I left and here when I came back, sir."

"Anybody else here?"

"Mr. Burnham was in just before I left. He was talking to Miss Alice, sir."

"Talking to Alice?"

There was something in his snappy tone that carried the intimation that Mr. Perkins didn't like this information.

"Yes, sir, talking confidential like. When I looked around, he stooped down and read something real low, and Miss Alice kind of blushed."

"That will do, George."

"As the boy opened the door Mr. Perkins called him back.

"Step across the hall to Mr. Burnham's office and tell him I want to see him."

Two minutes later Mr. Tom Burnham puffed in. He was a short, stout man, with a double chin and a laughing face.

"Want to see me, Bob?" he cried as he took a chair.

"Yes," replied Mr. Perkins. He paused a moment. "I'm worried and puzzled," he added. "Somebody is robbing me of my ideas."

"Get out!" said Mr. Burnham. "It's true," said Mr. Perkins. "A half dozen times within the last three weeks I have found myself face to face with evidence that my private papers have been tampered with."

"Seems incredible," said Mr. Burnham. "Yes, but it's true."

"Suspect anybody?"

"Yes."

Perkins rang the bell.

"George," he said, "tell Miss Phillips that I want her."

"Hold on," said Burnham. "I don't like this. It's all wrong. Just excuse me."

"Sit down," said Mr. Perkins. The stout man sank back in his chair. Then the door opened, and Alice entered. She cast a nervous glance from Perkins to Burnham. Her cheek paled a little, but her lips were firmly compressed. Perkins watched her narrowly.

"Sit down, Miss Phillips," he said. "I have called you in here to ask you a few questions. Somebody has been tampering with the private papers in my desk, Miss Phillips."

"The girl started, but she returned his gaze fearlessly."

"Yesterday afternoon this unknown was at work again. The tampering must have taken place while George was absent from the office. You, I think, were here until he returned?"

"I was here." Her voice was clear and steady.

"Did any one enter the outer office during that time?"

"Several men came to the door and inquired for you. Mr. Burnham is the only one who entered."

"Did you sit where you could see my private desk?"

"Not all the time. I moved my typewriter table to the window and put the screen about me."

"May I ask why you did that?"

The girl hesitated, but her gaze did not flinch.

"Because - because of Mr. Burnham's attentions."

"Come, now. I protest!" began the stout man.

"Sit down," said Perkins. He looked back at the girl. There was a deep flush on her cheeks.

"You mean that Mr. Burnham paid you attentions that you thought were out of place in a public office?"

Mr. Perkins' voice was cold and hard. The girl compressed her lips.

"Yes," she murmured.

"Hang it all, man," sputtered Burnham, "what has my saying a complimentary word or two to a pretty girl got to do with your alleged robbery?"

The girl turned her head and looked at him, and there was something in the look that made the heart in Perkins' bosom leap for joy.

"I have questioned George," he said hurriedly, as if the business had begun to nauseate him, "and he corroborates your statement. He saw Mr. Burnham stoop and murmur something to you - and - and you blushed."

"By George," cried Burnham, "this is decidedly kind!"

Perkins did not notice him. He was looking at the girl.

"Yes," she slowly said, "I remember. I will tell you what he said."

"It is not necessary," said Perkins. "Certainly not," cried Burnham.

"Do as you please," said Perkins. "It was only a simple request," the girl went on. "He said, 'I remember. I will tell you what he said.'"

"Go on," said Perkins.

"He said that he wished to clean an ink well, and he asked me for a hairpin."

Burnham laughed boisterously.

"You see," he chuckled.

Perkins arose and fumbled in his vest pocket.

"Is that your hairpin, Miss Phillips?" he asked. "I found it in the keyhole of my desk this morning."

Burnham arose. His face was livid.

"Just a joke, a practical joke," he muttered thickly and turned and rushed from the room.

"I knew it was that cur the instant you entered the room," said Perkins, but his voice changed as the girl arose. "Just a moment," he stammered. "I - I want to ask you one more question."

There is a new typewriter in the Perkins outer office, but as Mrs. Alice Phillips Perkins herself picked her out it is believed that she is a thoroughly competent and trustworthy successor to that esteemed lady - W. R. Rose in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

One of Lincoln's Dispatches.

In his "Campaigning With Grant," in The Century, General Horace Porter tells of General Halleck's fear of trouble from the enforcing of the draft and his desire that Grant should send troops to the northern cities. General Porter says: On the evening of Aug. 17 General Grant was sitting in front of his quarters with several staff officers about him when the telegraph operator came over from his tent and handed him a dispatch. He opened it, and as he proceeded with the reading his face became suffused with smiles. After he had finished it he broke into a hearty laugh. We were curious to know what could produce so much merriment in the general in the midst of the trying circumstances which surrounded him. He cast his eyes over the dispatch again and then remarked: "The president has more nerve than any of his advisers. This is what he says after reading my reply to Halleck's dispatch." He then read aloud to us the following: "I have seen your dispatch expressing your unwillingness to break your hold where you are. Neither am I willing. Hold on with a bulldog grip and chew and choke as much as possible."

"A. LINCOLN."

Tabooed.

"When I was in the lightning rod business," said the drummer, in a reminiscent mood, "I -"

But the smoking room had suddenly emptied, and he was an outcast among the traveling men thereafter. -Hard-ware.

INDEX-TRIBUNE

SONOMA, JULY 24, 1897.

M. H. GRANICE - EDITOR

NINETEEN YEARS OLD.

In another year the SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE will be out of its teens. To-day it enters upon the nineteenth year of its existence more prosperous and more influential than ever. For fourteen out of the nineteen years since Sonoma's local newspaper first entered the homes of the people of this valley it has been owned and controlled by the present management. In all these years its columns have been devoted to building up and improving both town and valley and advocating at all times the interests of the many as against the few. In pursuing this policy, which has been carried out without fear or favor or hope of reward, except in the consciousness of doing what was right, the INDEX-TRIBUNE, as a matter of fact, has incurred the displeasure, if not outright enmity, of a few people who cannot control its columns. These have done and are still doing all in their power to get rid of the only obstacle in their way of running this town to the end that their own private and selfish purposes may be subserved. The INDEX-TRIBUNE is the stumbling block in their way and they hate it because it stands in between the people and their private schemes.

Take for instance the water proposition. The advocacy of a municipal ownership of water works has called down upon the devoted head of the INDEX-TRIBUNE and its independent editor the anathemas of those who are blind to everything except self-interest. But the INDEX-TRIBUNE, notwithstanding these impotent efforts, still continues to sail serenely along in the journalistic sea, and like everything else it undertakes to do will land safely in port with the water proposition and other things having for their purpose the betterment of the social and business interests of Sonoma.

To the friends and patrons of the INDEX-TRIBUNE, and they are legion, we desire to say that in the future, as in the past, we will run this paper in the interests of the whole people, regardless of cliques, clans, and combinations. We thank these friends for their good offices, and assure them that the INDEX-TRIBUNE will be found on the side of the right, no matter where the lightning may strike.

THE GOLD FIELDS OF THE CLONDYKE.

The gold fever has struck California and it has struck it bad. Everybody is talking of the recent rich discoveries of gold in Alaska and thousands are preparing to leave for the new gold fields. The Frazier River and Cariboo mining excitements of the early days will not have been "in it" when compared with the Clondyke gold fever before it will have reached its height. Nothing in the history of modern times can compare with the reported richness of this new gold field, which, to use a miner's phrase, is "lousy" with the precious metal, if the sacks and nuggets of gold secured by returning miners in a few short months is any criterion to go by. The gold so far discovered is what is known as placer gold. It is found in the beds of rivers and on bars and flats, and unlike quartz gold does not require expensive machinery to mine it. All that is necessary is a pick, shovel, prospect pan, sluice boxes and riffles. These backed up by a good claim, a robust constitution and the necessary money to reach the land of gold and to lay in a supply of pork and beans for a year or two is all that is essential to put one on the road to a quick fortune in that far off land of the Clondyke.

That the mines are rich beyond all comparison with modern gold discoveries does not at this time admit of a doubt, as those who have returned have the sacks of gold to back them up in their marvelous stories of the richness of the new gold fields.

To those who live in Sonoma who have caught the gold fever and contemplate taking passage to the mines we would admonish them to go slow. The water problem of this town has yet to be solved. If it goes against certain parties in this town, who have threatened to leave in case the proposition carries, we would suggest they emigrate to the Clondyke. The City Trustees might vote them a "grub stake." The town could well afford to stand the expense.

Two Airmen—the Regular and Irregular.

To which would you prefer to belong? The regular, undoubtedly. The irregulars are, admittedly, the most numerous, but they are in a very undesirable state of non-discipline. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will soon remedy this want in a disordered liver or bowels. Bileousness manifests itself in yellowness of the skin and eyes, flatulency, sour breath, furred tongue, morning nausea, discomfort in the vicinity of the liver, vertigo and sick headache. Hosts of people suffer thus. These signs of insubordination to the governance of health, together with an irregular condition of the bowels, are soon regulated by the Bitters, which also overcomes malaria, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness and kidney trouble. As a means of checking premature decay, hastening convalescence, and mitigating the infirmities of age, the great tonic is without a parallel.

Local Brevities.

It is a sure thing that Santa Rosa will have more people in town on the 9th of September than ever before in its history. Already every available room has been secured. The Native Sons intend to celebrate this year in true patriotic style.

The lovers of athletic sports will have an opportunity of witnessing a game of base ball between the Napa and Buena Vista nines next Sunday. This is their first match game and a close score is anticipated.

Marvelous Effects

System Broken Down and Hope Almost Abandoned—Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"For fifteen years I have suffered with catarrh and indigestion and my whole system was broken down. I had almost abandoned any hope of recovery. I purchased six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and its effects have been marvelous. It has made me feel like a new man. I am able to sleep well, have a good appetite, and I have gained several pounds in weight." JAMES WILDER, Oroville, Wash.

"I had a scrofula swelling on one side of my neck and ulcerated sores in my nostrils, caused by catarrh. I also had small, itching sores on my limbs. I bought three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and began taking it and the sores soon healed. My blood is purified, and the scrofula has disappeared." O. D. McMANUS, Mission, Washington.

LOOTED.

Thieves Break Into a Farm House and Get Away With Everything in Sight.

Thieves broke into the farm house on the Nordwell place, about one mile west of Agua Caliente, on Monday morning last between 11 and 12 o'clock and looted the rooms from cellar to garret. No one was in the house at the time and they had everything their own way. Other things secured was a gold watch and chain, two pistols, two rifles, fifteen dollars in coin, a few robes and a quantity of clothing.

As soon as the robbery was discovered Sheriff Sam Allen was notified and Deputy Sheriffs Weise and Chas. Ohm repaired to the scene of the robbery and attempted to trace up and arrest the thieves, but they covered up their tracks so adroitly that the search for the offenders has proved unsuccessful so far.

DESTRUCTIVE FOREST FIRES.

Barns, Hay, Pasture and Fencing Licked up by the Flames.

On Saturday morning last dense columns of smoke were seen arising in the upper part of the valley. Shortly after news reached this place that a grass fire had started alongside the track of the Southern Pacific Company near Kenwood and was sweeping everything before it in the direction of Bennett Valley.

Over two hundred men, from far and near, were soon combating the flames with wet sacks. After burning over about three square miles of territory the fire was got under control about dark. Fifteen acres of vineyard, a barn, many tons of hay, pasture and considerable fencing were destroyed. The fire is supposed to have started from a passing locomotive of the Southern Pacific Company.

Another forest fire started on the Petaluma side of Sonoma Mountain, on Tuesday last, and spread with great rapidity over the mountain on the Sonoma Valley side. Fire-fighters, however, stopped the progress of the flames after they had burned over a large area of territory. By this fire a large quantity of pasture, fencing and stove wood was destroyed.

Organ Recital.

The new pipe organ, a model of beauty and exquisitely lovely in tone, will be put in place in the Congregational church of Sonoma the first part of next week. It will be an additional attraction to our town and valley of which every one should feel proud.

It is proposed to give an organ recital on the evening of Friday, July 30th, when Miss Kate Hutchinson of San Francisco, a talented organist of that city, who is associated with some of the leading musical organizations of Europe, will preside at the instrument. Other musical talent will be present and aid in the evening's entertainment. It will be a rare musical treat of which all should avail themselves. The nominal sum of twenty-five cents will be charged for admission to cover expenses. Tickets may be had at Duhring's store.

Heavy Shipment of Basalt Blocks.

S. Schocken is now engaged in filling an order for 35,000 basalt blocks to be delivered in San Francisco. The blocks are being shipped over the S. F. & N. P. Railway. At the present time Mr. Schocken has piled up alongside the switch opposite the depot over 150,000 blocks, which he expects to dispose of the present summer.

SAFE-CRACKERS.

Enter the Ticket Office of the S. F. & N. P. Railway,

And Blow the Safe to Pieces— Only $40 Secured.

Burglars effected an entrance into the ticket office of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway yesterday morning and with the use of a drill and powder blew the safe to pieces and secured about $40, all the money that it contained. The safe-crackers, after gaining access to the office by prying open a window, forced a door open leading into the warehouse, where they secured a quantity of tools, their intention being to remove the safe from the building to some isolated spot where they would be safe from intrusion. They secured a truck, crow bars and an ax. The safe was then removed from behind the counter and an effort made to get it out of the building. Evidently it was too heavy and the idea of carting it off was abandoned. The cracksmen then attempted to drill a hole through the door of the safe, but gave up the job after drilling about a quarter of an inch. The back of the safe, which was made of thin sheet iron, was then assailed with bit and drill and a hole drilled clear through the iron and cement. Powder was then introduced into the safe, a fuse attached and lighted. The force of the explosion blew out the door and completely wrecked the back of the safe. Three sacks of bran, secured from the warehouse, were piled on top and around the safe to deaden the sound. The cracksmen were evidently old hands at the business as they went at the job in a very methodical way.

The clock in the office stopped at 2:45 A. M., showing that the safe was blown open at that hour. Notwithstanding the precaution taken to muffle the sound of the explosion it aroused a number of people living in the near vicinity of the depot among others Enrico Eralde, proprietor of the Star Saloon, who was sick in bed and unable to go out and investigate the cause of the commotion.

The railway tickets and other property in the office, if we except the $40 in coin, were not molested. The robbery was not discovered until station agent Reed went to open the office at 6 o'clock. It then looked like it had been struck by a cyclone. This is the third attempt made to blow up the same safe. No clew to the burglars has yet been obtained, as they left no evidence behind to work upon.

These paintings, which are the largest and finest in Sonoma county, are valued at $500 each. "The Criterion" is on Exchange Avenue, opposite the Court House, where Harry will be pleased to see all his old Sonoma friends when they are in Santa Rosa.

Quite a number of runaway accidents have taken place in this city the past week. On Wednesday a horse attached to a light go-cart became frightened in front of Geo. Breitenbach's harness shop and wheeling suddenly upset the cart, in which was seated Miss Mary Mullen and another young lady. Fortunately both escaped unhurt, but the go-cart was badly wrecked. On Thursday a horse hitched to a cart and belonging to A. Pinelli ran away on Spain street. Mr. Pinelli was thrown out and escaped with a shaking up. The horse, after running a short distance, brought up in Leech's blacksmith shop. The cart was only slightly damaged.

It was moved by Trustee Hartin and seconded by Trustee Bulotti, that the City of Sonoma will pay to Mr. Schocken the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars upon condition that he will remove the old buildings and other obstructions from First-street East, from Spain street to the depot grounds, and convey to the City of Sonoma all his right, title and interest in and to the said street, all within sixty days from the date hereof, and the Board agrees in the event of the opening and conveying of said street as aforesaid, that the city will within one year from the date hereof, grade, gravel, curb and otherwise improve the said street in accordance with the request of Mr. Schocken in his recent communication to the Board on the subject. The motion was carried.

On motion of Trustee Bulotti, seconded by Trustee Modini, it was voted that the Clerk be instructed to post notices inviting bids to furnish water for the street sprinkler, the bids to be for all water required at a certain price per month, bids to close on date of next regular meeting at 6 o'clock P. M.

Dr. H. H. Davis appeared before the Board and asked to be relieved from the duty of paying a Street Poll Tax on the ground that as a soldier of the late Civil War he is exempt under a State law. The Clerk was requested to render an opinion on the subject to the Board at the next regular meeting.

The bridge on Spain street, between First and Second-streets West, was reported as requiring repairs, and the attention of the Street Committee was called to the same. On motion the Treasurer, Recorder and Marshal were ordered to prepare and file annual accounts and reports of their offices for the fiscal year between July 1st, 1896, and July 1st, 1897. The Board then adjourned.

A VICTIM OF HEART DISEASE. Sudden Death of Capt. E. P. Cutter.

Capt. E. P. Cutter, for many years a resident of this valley, died very suddenly last Wednesday morning at his home in the southern suburbs of town. He was seized with the attack that carried him off about 1 o'clock in the morning and three hours afterward he passed peacefully away. Capt. Cutter followed the sea for a number of years as master of a sailing vessel on the Atlantic Coast. He then came to California in the early fifties and shortly afterwards located in this valley, and for a number of years was the manager of the Buena Vista Vineyards. Later on he purchased a small but productive farm a short distance south of town, where he has ever since resided. Capt. Cutter leaves a widow and two sons, Eph. and Chas. Cutter. He was a member of Temple Lodge, No. 14, F. & A. M., under whose auspices his funeral took place yesterday.

Little Genevieve, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Green, aged sixteen months, died last Monday after several weeks' illness, brought on by teething. The little sufferer but a short time before being stricken down was the very picture of childish beauty, plump, pretty and the idol of her fond parents. Her death to them seems a sad burden to bear, but dear parents remember that

Your little darling has gone to rest,
On the bright and lovely shore;
She is an Angel now, by Saints caressed,
Where pain can affect her no more.
The remains were followed to the Catholic Cemetery Wednesday morning by many sorrowing friends, who brought with them beautiful flowers, which they strew upon her little grave.
